Got Loom?

Making full use of new, innovative features in Loom to support students with communication disorders.

Jennifer Courduff, Ph.D.
Azusa Pacific University
Sarah Orton, M.Ed
Professional Development

Feeling like this??

Teachers trying to keep up with virtual teaching, parent emails, virtual department meetings, virtual school-wide meetings, their own children, of the Cornonavirus, etc.

Maybe this?

There's a solution for your tired eyes and busy hands!

What is Loom anyway?

It's an amazing resource for creating and sharing videos with students!

How do you use it?

Live demo: Just you, you and the screen, just the screen.

One shot deal.
Look at the little green dot
You don't need to be perfect!
Just.
Be.

You.

Why do you use it?

- Video announcements
- Demo instructions for assignments
- Demo how to use different programs
- Students
- Parents
- Encouragement
- Humor
- Community

Loom for the littles...

1. Teach the parents - use Loom!
2. Using loom for students who are virtual
a. Talk about something they made or did
b. Show something they made or learned

"Isn't there an app for this?"

Loom for students with communication disorders

1. Social stories
2. Social settings
3. Articulation practice
4. Expression goals

For higher functioning kiddos....

1. Show what you learned
2. Explain how you did something
3. Teach others
4. Create a virtual field trip
5. About me videos

Brain break activities

- Dance dance dance videos!
- Social time
- Non-preferred activity in a preferred way
- Art
- PE
- Music

THERE IS NO TIRED LIKE "DISTANCE LEARNING" AGHER TIRED. LEARNING" TEACHER TRED.

Questions?

Feel free to contact us!

Jennifer Courduff, email: jcourduff@apu.edu, twitter: @gamine64
Sarah Orton, email: saorton@gmail.com

